PREFACE.

IT was while I was in the Utah Penitentiary in 1880, or just twenty years ago, that I commenced work on this Concordance to the Book of Mormon. Had I known the vast amount of labor, patience and care it would take to prepare it I should, undoubtedly, have hesitated before commencing so vast, so tedious and so costly a work. But having commenced, and feeling its necessity as a help to the study of the Divine Work whose name it bears, I have labored early and late on every available opportunity—labored and prayed—until it was prepared for the press.

I do not think there are any, perhaps with the single exception of the very few, who have attempted a work of the same kind, who can conceive of the amount of labor involved in the preparation of such a work. It is said that the compilation of the first Latin Concordance to the Bible (that done under the direction of Cardinal Hugo) occupied the time of 500 Dominican monks for years, from its commencement to its completion. Undoubtedly they must have pursued very elaborate and unbusiness-like methods, or worked very leisurely to occupy so long a period. I therefore claim that my manner of preparation must have been more methodical and expeditious to enable me to attend to the daily duties of my calling and have the work ready for the public in twenty years. In the direct work of arrangement, etc., I have received but little aid from others, though, of course, I have found it a great help to have the copy type-written and have had assistance in the reading of proof and in the comparison of the printed page with the original passages as they appear in the Book of Mormon. For I have deemed it essential to entire correctness to compare every passage as it appeared in the proof sheets with the same passage in the Sacred Record. This alone, my readers will readily perceive, wonderfully increases the labor above that involved in the preparation of an ordinary book.

The expense, too, was a consideration of no little importance. The cost of the electro plates, etc., nearly reached the sum of $3,000. I have but little hope while I live of receiving this amount back through sales of the book, to say nothing of the other expenses such as printing and binding. The circulation will necessarily at first be small. As the Church grows the demand will doubtless increase. But such a book was needed, and I felt that it was very improbable that anyone else would attempt to prepare one, and even if he commenced would carry it on to completion, so I kept on day by day until it was done.

There are some difficulties in preparing a Concordance to the Book of Mormon that are greater than are met with in the preparation of a like work to the Bible. The vocabulary of the Book of Mormon is much more limited than that of the Old and New Testaments and some of the more important words, such as God, Lord, etc., appear so frequently that to insert them without sub-division would make the labor of finding any one particular passage a lengthy and tedious undertaking, and greatly lessen the value of the book as a work of ready reference. I have therefore divided such words by side-headings under one general title; these sub-headings generally consist of the addition of the preceding preposition in the text to the main word, but occasionally they take the form of a short sentence, when that sentence occurs with sufficient frequency to warrant such a division. When this is done reference is made under the heading of the other words appearing in the sentence to the word under which the sentence can be found. For instance:

“Desire to know see Desire to know”

which being placed under the heading “Know” shows that the phrase “Desire to know” can be found under the general heading “Desire;” and the side heading “Desire to know”; the italicised word after “see” showing the heading under which any particular sentence can be found.

Another difficulty is that the literary style of the greater portion of the Book of Mormon is not as direct and condensed as is that of many of the writers in the Bible as given in the English translation. Consequently, as a rule, a longer extract is needed to enable the reader to successfully understand the passage. I have endeavored to obviate this difficulty, as much as possible, by giving lengthy texts, entirely filling up one line, even if the passage had by so doing to end in the middle of a word, and in many cases I have run the text over to a second line. This might possibly have been done to advantage more often than it has, was it not that such a practice adopted too frequently would make the Concordance of undesirable bulk and of greater cost.

L.—Laman, Lamanite, Lamanites, Lamanitish.

N.—Nephi, Nephite, Nephites.

Hd.—Head (Introduction to a chapter.)

The initial letter of the keyword (i. e., the word under consideration) is, as a rule, given instead of the word being printed in extenso:—Thus, under the heading Alma, A. stands for that name; under holy, h. takes the place of the full word.

Figures are frequently inserted (to admit longer quotations) where in the original the number appears at full length:—Thus 238 may appear in place of “two hundred and thirty and eight.” (Jarom 1:13.)

Two periods placed together thus . . (The Lord . . said) signify that a part of the passage is omitted, either one word or more.

ALMA—The Elder.

In early life he was one of the priests of Noah in the land of Lehi-Nephi, but accepting the teachings of the prophet Abinadi he became the instrument, in the hands of the Lord, of establishing a Christian church there. He and his followers afterwards fled to the land of Helam, but being brought into bondage by the Lamanites, afterwards escaped to the land of Zarahemla, where he was appointed presiding high priest to the church. He died there in B. C. 91, aged 82 years.

ALMA—The Younger.

The son of Alma, the elder. In early life he persecuted the members of the true church, but was converted through the ministrations of an angel. He then became a leading spirit in the church and nation. He succeeded his father as presiding high priest of the church, was made custodian of the sacred records, and elected by the people to be the first judge of the Nephite Republic (B. C. 91). He judged the people in righteousness until B. C. 83, when he resigned, as he found the duties of the head of the church and of the state too onerous for one person. Therefore to the end of his life he zealously devoted his time and energies to the work of the ministry. He was translated B. C. 73.
